Singer and stage actor Lance Raymundo's face is now "fully restored" two months after it was crushed (center) by an 80-pound barbell while he was exercising at a gym.

Lance took to Instagram last week to share his post-reconstructive surgery photo (far right) last March.

The latest photo, which was taken by lensman Von Buenconsejo, was also published by Ricky Lo in his column on the Philippine Star.

The March 20 "freak accident" crushed the actor's nose and middle face, leaving him with multiple facial bone fractures.

He underwent three reconstructive surgeries in his nose and middle face.

The trainer who was assisting Lance at the time of the accident was fired by the gym owners.

Lance, however, asked his father to convince the owners to rehire the trainer saying what happened was unintentional.
