

My nostalgia fix: Rory B. Quintos

Written by Amy de Guzman
Friday, 20 March 2015 19:51

Amy de Guzman-Schlanger (left) with Director Rory B. Quintos.

It's delightful to have a slice of home from a good story told well in a movie.

Last weekend, I got the chance to watch the blockbuster hit, "Crazy Beautiful You," story by Rory B. Quintos.

My nostalgia fix: Rory B. Quintos

Written by Amy de Guzman
Friday, 20 March 2015 19:51

I liked the movie and loved the story.

I had my nostalgia moment while watching it, and wondered how I could get a regular fix.

The answer is, teleserye.

If you're a Filipino, you will know what a teleserye is.

For a Filipino living outside of the Philippines, it serves as a bridge that connects our two worlds, and how these shows complete us even for a moment, like food craving.

Good Filipino food is not available everywhere here in the U.S.

I've lived in Flagstaff, Arizona for 24 years and if I want a taste of my favorite Filipino dishes, I have to drive almost 150 miles to the Phoenix area just to satisfy my craving.

However, the craving to watch Philippine entertainment, like teleseryes, can be satisfied anytime, anywhere, thanks to the worldwide web.

Touching the lives of Filipinos everywhere on demand makes a big difference.

My nostalgia fix: Rory B. Quintos

Written by Amy de Guzman
Friday, 20 March 2015 19:51

~~www.Pan-Quintos.com with Special Content and full content that is not available in the basic version of the software. This content is available for a limited time only. Please contact us for more information.~~

My nostalgia fix: Rory B. Quintos

Written by Amy de Guzman
Friday, 20 March 2015 19:51

Rory B. Quintos (left), with Kathryn Bernardo and Daniel Padilla, during a story