The 20-minute short film that bridges the stories of the blockbuster film “Heneral Luna” and its upcoming sequel “Goyo: Ang Batang Heneral” (The Young General) was just released in the Philippines this past February along with the acclaimed romantic comedy “I’m Drunk, I Love You.”

Fans of “Heneral Luna” from around the world can now catch “Angelito” with this exclusive Cinetropa digital release.

Set right after Luna’s assassination, “Angelito” focuses on Antonio Luna’s aides-de-camp, Jose and Manuel Bernal.

Alex Medina and Art Acuña, who play Jose and Manuel Bernal, respectively, reprise their roles.

Aside from the Bernal brothers, some central characters from “Heneral Luna” such as Arron Villaflor’s Joven Hernando are also part of this mini-sequel.

With fallen heroes at the forefront of this thrilling film, the release of “Angelito” this April also serves as a commemoration of the Philippines’ Araw ng Kagitingan (Bataan Day) in honor of all the country’s heroes who fought for independence throughout the nation’s history.

“Angelito” started streaming on Cinetropa.com pm April 16 for the price of $U.S.2.00 and Php100.00, respectively.

The global online availability of “Angelito” marks another first and exclusive digital release on Cinetropa.

As a special promo, viewers in the United States can get a 50% discount from any movie of
