Confirming once again how Filipino creative leadership has gone global, Filipino fashion designer Rodolfo “Puey” Quiñones Jr. paid a courtesy call on Consul General Claro S. Cristobal on March 27, 2019 and shared about his journey through the competitive yet exhilarating world of fashion.

Known for his embroidery, draping and hand-beading, “Puey” as he is popularly called, is currently creative director and Chief Operating Officer for U.S. operations of CocoMelody, a Los Angeles-based bridal brand.

On March 21, 2019, Puey found himself in New York once again to host a reception to unveil CocoMelody’s pop-up store at the Bowery, in the Lower East Side of Manhattan.

This was followed by a mini runway show to display some of the brand’s exquisite gowns.

Puey’s aesthetic is clearly visible in the collection.
